

60+ EARTH HOUR 127 DAYS 21 HOURS 31 MINUTES 1 SECONDS JOIN IN 8:30 PM MARCH 26

words by Chandré Peters

KULTCHA
This is where you can connect to the real heart and soul of Johannesburg. Get to read what our incredible writers are really thinking, have a look at what amazing artists are creating and engage with the Joburgers who are speaking their minds.

JHB NEWSLETTER
Get the exclusive weekly mail and keep up to date with all the weekend happenings. Click here for the latest issue.

Your Name Your Email

FOLLOW US

JHB NEWSLETTER
Delight your inbox every Thursday with the JHBLive newsletter. Receive the best reviews, views, news & to do's. click here for the latest issue.

your name
your surname
your email
 male female

MORE KULTCHA

 Concrete jungle grows a pair

 Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow: My Art is My Voice

 JHB Live Top 10 - Ndumiso Lindi

 Street Pole Politics

next more kultcha

LATEST JHB STUFF
Some thoughts by a JHB party monster
Why you can't put...

Johannesburg Kultcha : Kultcha / Features

Concrete jungle grows a pair

I want to pick strawberries from my wall for breakfast! Impossible you say? Read on:

See if you can dig a hole in that, Fido! It takes weeks to perfect that vegetable garden and months to see produce, but four little paws can destroy it all in the time it takes the postman to cycle past the house. Justin Sam has brought the clever concept of putting gardens on a wall to Johannesburg with his business, Vertical Landscapes.

Almost any plant can be incorporated into a vertical garden from seedling stage and the walls can be installed indoors and outdoors. The garden contains no soil but uses rock wall (a candy floss type of substance) to hold the plants in place. The plants get nutrients that are dissolved in water, which is pumped through an irrigation system to keep the plants moist without getting the wall or anything else wet. Don't believe me? Look at their previous Decorex stand where televisions were propped up on the wall among the plants. Nothing gets wet that shouldn't be wet!

More plants in the city means more oxygen production and companies are finding vertical gardens to be the next green step. Restaurants are building herb gardens on their walls to save space and money while corporates find this a way to get Green Building Credits (a rating system that grades how environmentally friendly buildings are). Your vertical garden can be functional by growing edible plants; or it can be all the beauty of the jungle in your bedroom without the bugs.

So you move into a fancy new loft apartment with a great view of the skyline, a decent sized balcony and-cough, cough, cough! You just looked down and got a lungful of truck fumes. Vertical gardens counteract the air pollution by absorbing gases such as carbon dioxide through photosynthesis and producing oxygen. This

JHB DAYFINDER

Tue Wed Thu
Fri Sat Sun
Mon click on a day

Free
Lifetime* Navigation
On Your Nokia
Smartphone

*For the lifetime of your phone

Nokia N97 Mini Nokia 5230 Nokia E72

ovi NOKIA

SUBSCRIBE & WIN
 A NAUGHTY PACKAGE TO THE VALUE OF R1000

Concrete jungle grows a pair
 A living, breathing

work of...

Jazz Cafe, Kasi Style
 The Jazzman tells stories...

Take-Out Like in the Movies.
 Yum Yum Chinese Food
 Lucky Moo

lessens your carbon footprint and eases the guilt about forgetting Earth Hour! A lot of plants go into one vertical garden so you've covered your bases for Arbour Day too.

A vertical garden comes with a two year maintenance contract in which the company regularly tends to the plants, replacing the nutrients and trimming the leaves. If you're like me then your cotton wool covered popcorn seed plant also died in Science class, so you don't want to have to maintain any garden. I want all the beauty with none of the work and I just want to pick strawberries from my wall for breakfast!

Justin Sam describes his gardens as a living, breathing work of art. I describe it as jungle fever in the city, or a garden for Jo'burg's gardenless. It would be great to see more walls of green among all the grey buildings around us to remind you this is Africa and not just another concrete jungle. It's about time the city grew a pair!

Vertical Landscapes displays their mobile garden at all the big home shows like Decorex and the Homemakers Expo. Go to www.verticallandscapes.co.za or email Justin@verticallandscapes.co.za for more information and installation of vertical and rooftop gardens.

Have a story or opinion you want to share? Click here

email to a friend ▼

Share

What do you say?

Your Name

Your Comment

Please enter the numbers displayed on the image above into the text box below:

Submit Comment

FEATURES

features
 interviews
 exhibitions
 columns

REVIEWS

bars
 club
 event
 restaurant
 shop
 travel
 adventure
 market
 random

NEWS

arts & culture
 community
 entertainment
 music
 politics
 food

GALLERIES

content shots
 party shots

EVENTS

art
 live music
 party
 kultcha
 theatre
 other
 world cup
 comedy

VENUES

art galleries
 bars
 clubs
 restaurants
 theatres
 markets